Abstracts

Turkey's machinery exports soared in 2018, thanks to the collapse of the Turkish lira and strong demand for Turkish machines on the back of the resumption of new projects and investment worldwide. During the first eight months of 2018, Turkey's currency depreciated by 30% against the US dollar, on the back of tensions with the US and increased concerns over the country's creditworthiness. According to the Machinery Exporters' Association, the top destinations for locally produced machinery in va...
