Abstracts

In 2022, UK consumers were faced with rising food prices as well as shrinking disposable incomes due to global economic uncertainties and supply chain disruptions caused by the Russia-Ukraine war. However, despite the price increases in the category, UK consumers did not compromise on their eating habits, and sales volumes of meals and soups continued to grow. Another factor responsible for this was the hobbled recovery of foodservice in 2022, which, in addition to the economic uncertainties, in...
