Abstracts

South Korea's metal products industry turnover dropped in 2017, amid slow-down in demand from major industry buyers. During the year, construction sector production in South Korea dipped, due to public spending reduction. Reduced spending on social infrastructure such as railway and road construction was accompanied by the decline in investments, which dropped by almost 4% at the end of the year. In addition to the slowing construction sector, the automotive industry's output continued to shrink...
