Abstracts

Omnichannel marketing activities and mobile apps may have been present in Singapore for approximately a decade, but bespoke mobile applications (native m-commerce) for retailers in Singapore have only recently started to gain traction. Prior to the pandemic, the value proposition offered by these apps was not attractive enough as their development was cost-prohibitive. For years, UI designers have sought to make websites mobile-friendly for consumers. However, being top of mind and the ease of c...
