Abstracts

In the forecast period, new car sales will be supported by an improved macroeconomy, while sales of electric vehicles (EVs) will be driven by incentives and a growing charging network. Public transport will aim to become more centralised, as taxis continue to dominate, while shared mobility will continue to be driven by the convenience of e-hailing. Car rentals will be boosted by tourism and rising business activity, while regulations for autonomous driving are likely to be drafted ahead of the...
