Abstracts

The Uruguayan government has instituted strict measures on tobacco: ban to smoke in all public places, including restaurants, bars and clubs, full ban on advertising and promotions, health warnings covering 80% of the packs surface and one type of cigarette per brand. These measures have proven effective and the total number of smokers declined sharply by 20% between 2005, when the first measures were applied, and 2012. The government also sponsored smoking cessation clinics, with low-cost...
