Abstracts

The Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic that spread across the country affected the job security, disposable incomes and purchasing power of Thai consumers. The worsening economic situation in the country was confirmed by a strong contraction in Thailand's GDP in 2020. As consumers became increasingly cautious over their spending due to the strong economic pressure on households in the wake of COVID-19, they tended to look for value for money and economy-priced products. While Thai consumers are oft...
