Abstracts

Although fish food is not the most important in terms of volume, due to the small amount they eat compared to other animals, it leads the category in terms of value. The scarcity of home-made alternatives to feed them contributes to the fact that they are mostly fed with imported food, which increases the category's value. The fact that fish eat less and are cheaper to maintain than other pets has made them popular for families who do not want the complications of having a regular pet.
