Abstracts

As the population aged 0-12 continues to rise, paediatric consumer health is expected to register growth in 2023 in both volume and current value terms, with nappy (diaper) rash treatments leading the way, followed by paediatric vitamins and dietary supplements, which is also expected to register the highest current value and volume growth in 2023. That being said, the price of paediatric consumer health products are considered high by price sensitive Algerian consumers and with inflation contin...
