Abstracts

In the United Arab Emirates, there is wide knowledge of consumer health, due to the diverse make-up of the population. However, there are a significant number of parents who continue to be hesitant to give children over-the-counter medications due to concerns about potential side-effects, or improper usage. Because of this, parents are becoming increasingly interested in purchasing herbal/traditional options for their children over standard OTC variants. This is also part of the natural trend, w...
