Abstracts

The pandemic, despite its negative impact on some economic sectors in Portugal, had a positive impact on pet care. Value sales of pet food and pet products were higher in 2022 than in 2021 and this sales growth is expected to continue over the forecast period. This sales growth is closely related to the increase in the number of pets, specifically dogs and cats. However, other pets such as birds and fish show a decreasing demand due to the lack of interest in this type of animal as pets.
