Abstracts

Both frozen processed fruit and vegetables and shelf stable fruit and vegetables saw a major spike in demand in 2020 as consumers were cooking at home more due to being home-bound as a result of COVID-19 restrictions. This provided a boost to the unit volumes of flexible plastic used in frozen products and metal food cans used for shelf stable goods in this year. While growth slowed in 2021, it was still positive, with frozen processed fruit and vegetables still seeing a particularly strong sale...
