Abstracts

After registering volume sales declines during 2019, processed fruit bounced back strongly during 2020 as the category registered double-digit sales growth rates. This was mainly due to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. As the COVID-19 virus spread throughout the country during the second quarter of the year, residents were required to stay at home wherever possible, and in addition to socialising and leisure activities moving into the home environment, this led many to begin working and stud...
