Abstracts

Most areas of processed meat and seafood saw a spike in demand in 2020, when the pandemic meant that consumers were spending a lot more time at home than usual, giving them more time for at-home meal preparation, a trend that was also being driven by foodservice closures. Given this environment, demand for many types of processed meat and seafood saw better performances in 2020 than a year earlier. Frozen and, in particular, shelf stable products were also seen as ideal for stockpiling during lo...
