Abstracts

There was only a relatively small spike in the rate of growth for processed meat and seafood packaging in 2020, which had already slowed by 2021. However, this was more to do with the fact that chilled processed meat dominates the overall category, and this product area did not see any real spike in demand in 2020. Instead, it was the frozen and shelf stable categories, which are all much smaller than chilled processed meat, that were recording stronger growth in 2020, with consumers spending mo...
