Abstracts

The COVID-19 restrictions introduced when the pandemic hit the country in 2020, saw consumers stockpiling packaged food products, with processed fruit and vegetables ideal for this. This saw a major spike in packaging unit volume sales in processed fruit and vegetables in 2020. A decline was then seen in 2021, as sales normalised, with positive, if generally modest, growth seen across most categories in 2022. Given the size of the demand spike in 2020, however, processed fruit and vegetables pac...
