Abstracts

While unit volume sales of processed fruit and vegetables packaging were falling again in 2022, it was a slower decline than that experienced in the previous year. In 2020, the category saw a sales boom due to the restrictions on mobility put into place due to the pandemic. In 2021, as cooking fatigue set in and consumers remained well-stocked up on shelf stable products, volume sales dropped sharply. In 2022, the decline was stemmed, in part, by the high cost of living. Shelf stable fruit and v...
