Abstracts

Despite the declining birth rate, Mexico is still a “young country”, with the median age of the population being 29 in 2023. The population of Mexico reached just above 128 million in 2023, with over half of people aged below 34. However, there is a visible trend of population ageing in the country. The population aged 65+ grew throughout the review period to account for a rising share of the total population: it went from 7.8% of the population in 2022 to 8.0% in 2023. This also means 4% growth...
