Abstracts

Retail in Peru has experienced a sustained increase in prices since 2021, but the situation has worsened in recent years with inflation soaring and remaining high in 2023. Although local brands are well established in Peru, many of the final products and supplies are imported. Rising international logistical costs and supply shortages of some finished products, together with the effects of the Russia-Ukraine war and the unstable political context in Peru, have pushed up import prices. In agricul...
