Abstracts

In 2022, the annual rate of inflation in the US rose to the highest level recorded in 40 years. As a result, rising costs firmly supplanted the COVID-19 pandemic as US consumers' foremost concern. With the prices of groceries and petrol rising significantly faster than the baseline rate of inflation, many lower-income consumers found that almost all of their retail spending needed to be reserved for essentials. However, even more affluent consumers found that a far higher share of their spending...
