Abstracts

In 2022, retail tissue faced significant challenges due to high inflation, supply chain disruptions, and rising raw materials costs, particularly cellulose and paper pulp. These factors contributed to a substantial increase in retail current value growth across various categories even as volume sales declined, marking a stark contrast to the performances observed in 2021. However, the landscape shifted in 2023, as production costs began to decrease, following a reduction in the prices of key raw...
