Abstracts

Sauces, dips and condiments as a whole as well as most of the product areas within it saw a spike in demand in 2020, when the pandemic hit the country, followed by slowing growth in both 2021 and 2022, albeit generally only moving back into line with the pre-pandemic performances. As people spent more time at home with the onset of COVID-19, with consumer foodservice outlets also being closed, there was a major increase in home cooking. To facilitate this, sauces recorded strong demand, as they...
