Abstracts

Australia has been experiencing unprecedented inflation, which is causing consumers to restrict their discretionary spending. On the supply side, manufacturers are facing increased input costs resulting from commodities, energy, and supply chain challenges. As a result of this, companies have had to increase their unit prices. After a year of retail volume decline in 2022, this is expected to limit the rebound in 2023, while the category will see strong retail current value growth due to price r...
