Abstracts

Consuming smokeless tobacco has always been legal in Algeria. Loose US-style moist snuff, known locally as Chemma, is the only smokeless tobacco product available, and is traditionally popular in Algeria, although it is consumed by men much more than women, whose consumption remains negligible. Chemma is very popular among the elderly, but young consumers also use this type of tobacco to help them quit smoking, and many smokers become “chewers”, believing that chewing tobacco is less harmful than...
