Abstracts

The PET bottle, which continued to record increasing packaging unit volumes in 2022, remains the dominant pack type across the soft drinks industry in China, with this expected to continue over the forecast period. This is because this pack type is easy and affordable to manufacture as well as being easy to stack, store and transport. Moreover, PET bottles are seen as being sustainable in China as they are easy to recycle and convenient during production as they can be easily customised into var...
