Abstracts

In 2023, staple foods witnessed a slightly better performance in volume terms, even though consumer demand is beginning to stagnate in response to the country's population decline, which is reducing the potential consumer base. Most staple food categories are mature and there is very little room for significant volume growth rates year on year. Furthermore, staple foods continued to face strong price growth in 2023, creating a second year of double-digit current value growth. Costs associated wi...
