Abstracts

Retail volume sales of staple foods in the Czech republic suffered a decline in sales in constant value terms in 2023, in the face of the rising cost of living, which curbed consumer spending. The country's post-pandemic recovery was also derailed by the ongoing war in Ukraine, which led to a sharp rise in energy prices. With wages decreasing in real terms, many consumers were forced to trade down to cheaper, private label alternatives to their usual brands. Czechs normally regard private labels...
