Abstracts

Sales of staple foods have been negatively impacted by the elevated inflation that hit France in late 2022 and early 2023. As a result, the vast majority of prices went up across staple foods with volume sales either showing minimal growth or even declining in some categories as consumers were forced to prioritise their spending. Frozen products, as well as pasta, meat and fish saw particularly high price increases with manufacturers facing rising costs, including an increase in the cost of key...
