Abstracts

The consumption of honey is quite low in Thailand, with these products mainly used for mixing with drinks and as a dip with toast. Although the pandemic lockdown policy forced consumers to stay at home more, honey saw little demand for home cooking, due to the complicated nature of such recipes and the high sugar content of the product. Honey is rarely spread on bread, as Thai consumers prefer to use other kinds of spreads, such as jams and preserves, chocolate spreads, and butter for this purpo...
