Abstracts

Sweet spreads recorded a major spike in its sales and packaging unit volumes in 2020, driven by the lifestyle changes associated with the COVID-19 pandemic. Consumers in the UK faced long periods of national lockdown measures, including the widespread shift to remote working and learning for much of 2020. These measures, taken to reduce the spread of the COVID-19 virus in the country, meant that consumers spent much more time at home than usual for most of 2020. This stimulated growth in sweet S...
