Abstracts

After a demand spike in 2020, when COVID-19 hit Western Europe, followed by further growth in 2021, with some restrictions still in place, the return to near normality in 2022 has seen tea sales decline slightly. However, they remain well above pre-pandemic levels, with positive growth expected over the forecast period. Fruit/herbal tea will account for the bulk of new sales in 2022-2027, but loose black tea, green tea and other tea will also be developing positively in the coming years.

Euromonitor International's Tea in Western Europe global briefing offers an insight into to the size and shape of the Hot Drinks market, highlights buzz topics, emerging geographies, categories and trends as well as pressing industry issues and white spaces.
