Abstracts

Retail tissue and hygiene in Australia experienced mixed trends in 2022, as some categories returned to pre-pandemic levels of demand, while others maintained elevated demand. Retail tissue, especially toilet paper, saw a decline in demand, as consumers reduced their stockpiling behaviour and spent more time outside of their homes. Away-from-home tissue, on the other hand, recovered from the sharp drop seen in 2020, as offices reopened, tourism resumed, and foodservice outlets attracted more customers.
