Abstracts

Retail sales of tissue and hygiene in Taiwan registered accelerated growth in current value terms in 2023, when compared to the previous year. Prevailing Inflationary pressures were a key contributor this trend, as rising raw material and supply chain costs led to price increases across all categories. However, growth was also supported by an increase in consumer mobility, alongside growing hygiene concerns, as the country emerged from the COVID-19 pandemic. This boosted sales of items such as r...
