Abstracts

In 2013, domestic tourism flows were boosted by a combination of diverse factors. For example, the fact that there were 19 public holidays in 2013 encouraged people to travel throughout the year instead of taking only one large holiday while the high inflation rate led people to spend money instead of saving it (according to private estimates by the National Congress, inflation reached over 28%). In addition, according to trade press during 2013 average salary increases reached almost 23%.
