Abstracts

Macroeconomic conditions had a positive impact on the overall travel and tourism industry in 2013. Chilean real GDP increased by 4%. The unemployment rate reduced to 6% in 2013. These trends boosted domestic tourism flows. Chileans had more resources to spend on these types of products and services without sacrificing expenditure on other areas. Chileans took advantage of this prosperity, with more trips to different places in the country, even to more-expensive places such as San Pedro de...
