Abstracts

The development of art galleries in Hong Kong had reached a significant milestone when Art Basel, the world's largest modern and contemporary art fair, made its debut in the city in May 2013. The fair attracted the participation of 245 leading galleries and over 60,000 visitors from around the world. It shed light on a blossoming trend in art and culture development. Such a trend was supported by the development of West Kowloon Cultural District and collaboration of pop-up art within shopping...
