Abstracts

Retail sales of traditional toys and games saw a decline in constant value terms in 2022, as new generations of younger consumers preferred to seek out entertainment via digital platforms. Demand was further hampered by a continued decline in the national birth rate, which led to a decrease in the number of children aged 0 to 14. With more women building careers, they are choosing to have fewer children than previous generations. However, the upside of this is that some parents are now prepared...
