Abstracts

Mexican demand for transportation and warehousing continued to increase in 2018, thanks to growing foreign trade activities. General exports increased at a double-digit rate in 2018, in this way lifting need for goods transportation services. Nevertheless, the country's economic development was slightly slower than in 2017 due to increased uncertainty over renegotiation of the NAFTA deal, and Mexico's general elections, which led to cautious consumer demand growth and easing of expansion of indu...
