Abstracts

In 2013 travel accommodation saw astonishing 20% current value growth, stemming mainly from the performance of hotels. Hotels registered 23% current value growth in 2013, compared with only a CAGR of 9% over the review period. Above-average growth rates in value sales in domestic tourism and inbound tourism were the main reasons for the good performance of hotels at the end of the review period. The average occupancy rates in the market increased due to the higher number of tourists. Also, the...
