Abstracts

After the exceptionally weak performances of 2020-2021, excluding certain categories connected with domestic tourism, travel has been recovering and moving towards 2019 pre-Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic levels. Faster inbound and outbound tourism flows have led to improved key performance indicators for players, such as more flights and busier airports and more people staying in lodging outlets and visiting attractions and experiences. All of this resulted in increased numbers of and higher va...
