Abstracts

After a long period of revenue decline among travel retailers, 2013 was the first year to produce a low but positive growth rate of 1%. The financial crisis hit travel retailers hard in 2008, and the review period further deteriorated the environment with the expansion of online tourism, and the expansion of low cost carriers, especially after the bankruptcy of national air carrier Malév. Revenue numbers showed a harsh decline over the review period which noticeably reduced the base for growth.
