Abstracts

The US is undergoing socioeconomic and demographic changes that will reshape its consumers. In 2025, more Americans will live in urban areas. More households will be without children. The population will be more diverse and older. Income will be almost evenly divided among Baby Boomers, Generation X and Millennials, but overall, the wealthiest 10% of households will control most of it. This report will examine how retailers can adapt to the changes in the US consumer base.

Euromonitor International's US Consumers in 2025: What's in Store for Retailers? global briefing offers an insight into the size and shape of the retailing industry, highlights emerging trends, their effects on retailing in markets around the world, on the development of channels and consumers' shopping patterns. It identifies the leading companies and brands, offers strategic analysis of key factors influencing the market – be they the developments of new store types, the importance of non-store retailing, economic/lifestyle influences, private label or pricing issues. Forecasts illustrate how the market is set to change and criteria for success.
