Abstracts

Vitamins enjoyed a surge in demand throughout the COVID-19 wave which started after the lifting of COVID-19 restrictions in December 2022, and lasted during the first half of 2023. Products with the purpose of immune support, such as vitamin C, which has been widely recognised as having immune support benefits, thus experienced a sales peak in the winter season, and were widely out of stock both online and offline. As the COVID-19 wave eased, the specific products that benefited from the surge i...
