Abstracts

Vitamin sales patterns are returning back to normality in 2023, following the surge in demand at the height of the pandemic period, although high inflation remain an issue. The COVID-19 pandemic encouraged consumers to take better care of their health and invest in vitamins as a preventative health measure, supporting different systems in the body and overall wellbeing. Whilst this focus on health and wellness prevails, since 2022 soaring inflation has squeezed household budgets and caused unit...
