Abstracts

Multivitamins is set to deliver moderate growth in current value terms in 2023, representing a significant slowdown from the growth seen during the pandemic. This slower growth is largely the result of the lower demand for multivitamins positioned for the immune system. Italians are no longer focusing on the immune system in such great numbers with the category losing momentum now that the pandemic is over. Nonetheless, while growth has slowed multivitamins still remains an important category wi...
