Abstracts

Wearable electronics continued to see a healthy performance in retail volume terms in 2023, supported by increased purchases of activity watches and smart wearables. Prevailing health and wellness trends and the high levels of convenience and functionality offered by these products served to engage consumer interest. With activity bands having disappeared from the market in 2021, the leading players shifted their focus towards smart wearables, in order to attract consumers. However, the pace of...
