Abstracts

Consumer demand for wound care products remains stable in 2023, despite the significant unit price increases which had only a mild effect on retail volume growth. Conversely, current value growth has reached double-digits due to the price rises. Wound care is driven by stable consumer demand, with a solid performance seen in all wound care categories. The trend towards convenience and increased consumer confidence in self-medication have helped wound care to achieve current value growth in 2023,...
