Abstracts

Market Overview

Manufacturers of beer dispensers are now offering automatic tap systems to solve the problem of brew waste when using manual faucets. To reduce beer waste, automated taps require the use of a Radio-Frequency Identification (RFID) card, which must be placed in the slot above the optimum taps. In addition to reducing beer waste, computerized taps allow customers to see their available balance and track the amount of beer consumed.

Upsurge in urbanization

The use of beer dispensers has increased as urbanization has increased in many emerging nations. More bars, breweries, hotels, taverns, restaurants, and other establishments have opened as metropolitan areas have progressed and developed. With a rise in purchasing power, people in South Asia and East Asia are spending more on food and leisure activities. This is expected to boost the market in the projected period.
