Abstracts

Gain new KOL insights on the latest events happening in idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis (IPF): Topics covered include opinions about Gilead's suspension of a Phase II trial of simtuzumab; Boehringer Ingelheim's initiation of a Phase IV trial combining Esbriet (pirfenidone) with Ofev (nintedanib), as well as views on DS Biopharma's completion of a Phase I trial of an oral formulation of DS102 (15-HEPE).

How do KOLs view the recent failure of Gilead's Phase II trial of simtuzumab?

Is simtuzumab's mechanism of action worthy of further investigation for the treatment of IPF?

How do KOLs rate the importance of Boehringer Ingelheim's Phase IV trial combining Esbriet with Ofev for the treatment of IPF?

How do KOLs view combining Esbriet with Ofev in terms of gastrointestinal tolerability and pharmacokinetics?

Will benefits in terms of efficacy and quality of life justify the high cost of combining Esbriet with Ofev?

How likely is it that the combination of Esbriet with Ofev will be used in preference to sequential therapy?

In light of recent data, what is the likelihood that an anti-inflammatory molecule, such as DS Biopharma's DS102, will constitute a successful treatment approach for IPF?
