Abstracts

Two brands enjoy big market share boosts as market barriers hinder competitors

Market barriers affect more than a third of asthma/COPD prescriptions in the US. According to our survey, roughly 55% of doctors can't prescribe certain brands because they're either too expensive, or not available of formularies. Not all brands lose out, though. Two of the leading treatments get a market share bump of almost 5% because doctors can't prescribe competitors.

Market Access Impact: Asthma/COPD (US) shows you how 7 barriers affect your market share, revealing how much you win and lose, who you take share from, and who gets your lost share.

Based on a survey of 100 US-based pulmonologists and primary care physicians, the report covers 12 major therapies from AstraZeneca, Boehringer Ingelheim, GSK, Novartis, and Roche.

Top Takeaways

Barriers affect more than a third of prescriptions: The two biggest barriers have a bigger impact than all other barriers combined.

Two brands see impressive market share gains: Each sees a net increase of nearly 5% because barriers prevent doctors from prescribing competing treatments.

Most brands lose: 8 of the 12 surveyed brands see a net market share loss, although many of those losses are modest.

Few brands are widely prescribed: Only 4 brands are prescribed by more than about 65% of doctors. However, many doctors are willing to consider brands they don't prescribe.

More doctors experience cost and formulary availability barriers: Roughly 20-40% of doctors can't prescribe most brands because they're too expensive or not available on formularies.

Low awareness is a problem for some brands: 20-30% of doctors simply haven't heard of 4 of the surveyed brands.
